ABOUT THE PROGRAM

The Gerontology College Certificate program is designed to prepare students for direct service occupations in the care of seniors. Students are trained for positions in counseling, case management, and program administration. The job opportunities are available in diverse locations, such as housing complexes, nursing and congregate care facilities, adult day care centers, and mental health agencies. The program explores the normal processes of aging and related social, legal and economic issues.

WHAT DO THE WORKERS WHO SERVE THE GERONTOLOGY COMMUNITY DO?

Social and human service assistants help people get through difficult times or get additional support. They help other workers, such as social workers, and they help clients find benefits or community services. With the elderly, workers help clients stay in their own homes and under their own care whenever possible. They coordinate meal deliveries or find personal care aides to help older people with day-to-day needs, such as doing errands or bathing. In some cases, human service workers help look for residential care facilities, such as nursing homes.

WHERE DO THEY WORK?

Social and human service assistants work for nonprofit organizations, for-profit social service agencies, and state and local governments. They generally work full-time, and some work nights and weekends.
