Teacher Education: Elementary Education

PAY

In May 2015, the median annual wage for kindergarten teachers and elementary school teachers was $54,550. The median annual wage for high school teachers was $57,200 in May 2015.

JOB OUTLOOK

Employment of kindergarten and elementary school teachers is projected to grow 6 percent from 2014 to 2024, about as fast as the average for all occupations. Growth is expected due to projected increases in enrollment as well as declines in student-teacher ratios. However, employment growth will vary by region. Employment of high school teachers is projected to grow 6 percent from 2014 to 2024, about as fast as the average for all occupations. Overall growth is expected due to declines in student-to-teacher ratios and increases in enrollment.

ABOUT THE PROGRAM

The Teacher Education Associate of Arts degree in elementary education offers career opportunities to complete the first two years of the baccalaureate degree requirements leading to teacher certification in special education, elementary education and secondary education. The program is designed to prepare prospective teachers to be innovative role models and leaders in academic environments. In order to acquire the skills and abilities necessary for excellence in teaching, students will participate in classes, fieldwork, support services and workshops.

WHAT DO TEACHERS DO?

Kindergarten and elementary school teachers prepare younger students for future schooling by teaching them the basics of subjects such as math and reading. High school teachers help prepare students for life after graduation. They teach academic lessons and various skills that students will need to attend college and to enter the job market.

WHERE DO THEY WORK?

Kindergarten and elementary school teachers work in public and private schools. They generally work school hours when students are present, and use nights and weekends to prepare lessons and grade papers. High school teachers work in either public or private schools. Generally, they work school hours, which vary somewhat, but most also work evenings and weekends to prepare lessons and grade papers.
