WCCCD Celebrates National Reading Month

At Wayne County Community College District, forging a love of reading has been a personal mission for Chancellor Dr. Curtis L. Ivery and his wife, Ola Ivery.

Ola started The Reading Carnival for Children, held annually, in 2004. This signature event has grown to include thousands of children and families, immersing them in a world of storytelling and imagination. Families are invited back for several BookWorm Club meetings, where children are led in storytelling, songs, and appearances from the cuddly BookWorm to help grow their excitement for reading.

Reading is not just for National Reading Month – it’s for every day!

Grow your love of reading at Wayne County Community College District, where learning leads to a better life!

“We know that early literacy skills are one of the most powerful tools for personal and economic growth and progress. It has been a lifelong passion for me and my husband to empower future generations – to spark their curiosity and to champion their intellectual growth so that they might create their best lives through education.”

— Ola Ivery
