Website Redesign Taskforce

The new website has a comprehensive list of exciting new features that enhance the user experience. The Content Management System (CMS) vendor, Ingeniux, recently guided the Website Redesign Taskforce through training on how to maximize the new look and feel of the website. The team learned the ins and outs of event detail pages and how to build out a master calendar. The new site will be able to dynamically populate events to their respective campus locations based on new tags and filters inside the CMS.

The taskforce also held meetings with our design partner, Stamats, to help review and test our new site for accessibility. During the site review, Stamats will also guide us on the best practices on call-to-action items, including buttons on our homepage and menu navigation for a seamless user experience.

SUCCESS, FAILURE, AND THE COURAGE TO CONTINUE

Bernie Marcus, the Co-founder of Home Depot and the Founder of the Marcus Foundation, is still contributing to society at age 93. He has been enormously successful, and he has been willing to share his approach to helping others.

He begins by saying that his senior team was never really impressed with themselves. They were humble and were “always looking for flaws, weaknesses, and ways to improve.” At Home Depot, “we visited our competitors, listened to complaints, talked to our customers, and tested new technologies,” as Marcus stated in Kick Up Some Dust. We found that giving away big money through the Marcus Foundation also had its challenges, and “we learned to ask tough questions, leveraged our giving to encourage others to join, and tried to expand our partnerships”

Both in retail and in philanthropy, Marcus was always looking at what they learned and how they could get better. He quotes Winston Churchill, who said “success is not final, failure is not fatal; it is the courage to continue that counts.” The ability to pivot from both failures and successes is what enriches life.

Institutional Effectiveness

What’s Trending: Benchmarking: Transfers

The Division of Institutional Effectiveness (IE) reviews local and national research to support and assist the District with improving programs and services offered to students. Benchmarking can be used to measure student behaviors and patterns. IE utilizes many national data systems including the Integrated Postsecondary Education Data System (IPEDS) as benchmarking tools. IPEDS is a system of that collects data from all postsecondary institutions. According to IPEDS the average three-year transfer-out rate for community colleges in Michigan is 25%.

!MI Community College Transfer-Out Rates

In addition, to IPEDS the National Student Clearinghouse (NSC) Research Center updates the key metrics such as completion and transfer rates to benchmark and measure progress of two-to four-year institutions. Approximately 52% of Bachelor’s Degree earners had prior enrollment and credits from a Michigan community college.
