The program is open to the public at no cost and parking is available in the District’s connecting lot.

Local medical professionals will host presentations nutrition and diet; diabetes and hypertension prevention and management; diabetic foot care; prostate cancer and prostate conditions, bladder control issues (Incontinence) and sexually transmitted disease prevention.

The day-long health fair will give the public the opportunity to engage top medical professionals in general group conversations as well as specific, one-on-one discussions.

Dr. Conrad C. Maitland, a urologist who serves as the Site Director of Urology Residence at Sinai-Grace Hospital in Detroit, will facilitate the program for the day.

“I will be addressing the issues of the risks that prostate conditions and cancer pose to the health and wellness of male populations throughout America; especially those of people of color, who are twice as likely to die from the disease,” Dr. Maitland said.
Among vendors exhibiting at the fair will be the Detroit Medical Center, Detroit Fire Department, Community Network Services, Blue Cross Blue Shield/Blue Care Network, Sherwood Urology, WCCCD’s Health Sciences, and the Michigan Institute for Public Safety, located at the WCCCD’s Downriver Campus.
